Seven Winds Garden

Jüri-Jaani Talu, Lõetsa küla, Muhumaa, Saare maakond, Eesti, saaremaa

The garden is an exciting combination of farm architecture and small garden forms, with the views opening up on the garden and the surrounding fields from the terraces and recreational areas. The garden features plants suitable for the conditions and matching the surrounding landscape.

Description

The farm and the surroundings of the garden are predominantly open to western winds. The garden is about a hectare in size, containing more than a hundred taxa. The soils and natural conditions here are characteristic to the islands in West-Estonia.

The establishment of the Garden of Seven Winds was started in 2009. The garden is an exciting combination of farm architecture and small garden forms, with the views opening up on the garden and the surrounding fields from the terraces and recreational areas. The garden features plants suitable for the conditions and matching the surrounding landscape. The species-rich grassland around the farm is blooming till the end of the summer. In the garden, old lilacs and garden ceramics catch the eye; the colour palette is formed by blue, white, purple and yellow and the grasses swept by the winds in the background.
Grasses to create form
Grasses are the main landscaping form in the garden, bringing the nature into a mysterious movement through all seasons, from spring to spring.

In addition to grasses, the landscaping features the following:

- lavender,
- woodland sage,
- catnip,
- giant scabious,
- geraniums,
- perennial flax,
- Culver’s roots.

The back garden has a ceramics workshop with various kilns – Creativity Hub, where ceramics and art workshops are held. The new Garden Gallery is a source of high-quality handicraft and art all year round.

Enjoy a day for yourself! Walk around in the garden, have a seat in the Garden Gallery and browse through gardening books and magazines. The Garden Gallery is a source of high-quality handicraft and art all year round.
